BIN AROUND THE WORLD

I was an avid reader of MAD Magazine into my teens and then I grew up, made friends and had a life. I thought I could protect my kids from your horrible influence by moving overseas, but they found a copy of your magazine in the trashcan at school. Now I'm stuck with a subscription to MAD and there's no telling what's going to become of my poor kids and their once-promising futures.

John T. • Bangkok, Thailand

John, Baby, John — This just proves what we've always said: as long as there are trashcans, there will always be a place to find MAD! But don't fret too much about MAD's influence on your children — as long as they have strong, intelligent role models at home, they should be fine. So, yeah, they're screwed (unless your wife is some kind of super-genius warrior-goddess...who has inexplicably low standards for spouses). Anyway, thanks for subscribing! —Ed.

PRACTICE WHAT YOU TEACH

We were so delighted to see you expand your horizons (and language comprehension skills!) by including juvenile literature with your superb rendition of "No, Donald!" in issue 545. So much so, that my wife and I decided to permanently include MAD as an integral part of our homeschool curriculum for our three beloved offspring, Gianluca, Maia, and Alessio (left to right). Oh, don't worry: we're not foolish enough to presume that your trashy excuse of a publication will add to our children's well-being in any way whatsoever (quite the opposite, actually). Rather, our only intention is to henceforth lay the blame on you clowns every time a random person shakes their head at our kids' awkward behavior and mutters, "They must be homeschooled!" Thanks for the wonderful public service (and shameless scapegoating), you guys!

Frank Spatone • Ontario, Canada

Spatone-y Danza — So, let us get this straight — when someone blames homeschooling for your kids' awkward behavior, you're going to say it's because they read MAD...which you gave them...as part of their homeschooling? Sounds like an airtight alibi, Teach! A-pluses all around! With that kind of education, your kids may be the first homeschoolers who drop out. —Ed.

WAY, WAY BACK ISSUES

After sitting in my brother's basement for over 45 years, I got my MADs back. Next I'm hoping he returns my dog.

Babaloo Mandel • Woodland Hills, CA

Mandel in the Wind — Congratulations on getting your old MADs back — we hope you're reunited with your dog soon as well. After more than four decades, your dog and these magazines have probably aged equally well. —Ed.

DEAD GIVEAWAYS

Like much of America, I was shocked and saddened to learn that you will no longer offer giveaways for the letters you print in MAD. I have been so looking forward to receiving the paperback edition of The Glorious History of Anthrax, or a VHS tape of episode three of Suddenly Susan or a tube sock autographed by Dan Quayle. Thanks for the disappointment.

Barry Meadow • Fallbrook, CA

Barry, Queen of Scots — Wait, are we thanking people for disappointments now? If that's the case, we owe you a HUGE "thank you" for your letter! —Ed.

REVERSE-CASE SCENARIO

During the course of reading MAD Magazine for over three decades, I have discovered a deeply disturbing trend. Every issue gets worse and worse, even by your own low standards. So, in order to combat this problem, I have developed the following strategy: I save my issues of MAD for a year and then binge-read them in reverse order, so that the quality appears to get better instead of worse. The problem is that it only takes a week to read six issues and then I must wait an entire year to read MAD again. So, why don't you guys make my life easier and just write six issues in advance and then publish them in reverse order so that I can enjoy MAD like a regular guy?

Tobias Hurwitz • Towson, MD

On Her Majesty's Secret Hurwitz — The joke's on you, big guy — we've been writing six issues in advance and then publishing them in reverse order for years! Why do you think this issue is packed with articles like "A MAD Look at Leaf Blowers" and "Snappy Answers to Stupid Questions: 'Third Week of October' Edition"? Sure, it's a strange way to do things, but it's no stranger than binge-reading a bunch of crappy humor magazines to trick yourself into thinking that you're somehow improving their quality. Because no matter what order you read them in, MAD will always be a waste of time! —Ed.

STATS ALL, FOLKS!

I am a 43-year-old professor of statistics at Santa Monica College and lifelong reader of your silly periodical. I've recently discovered that my true calling is writing comedy and I plan to change careers. I calculated the probability, though, of someone my age with no experience becoming a comedy writer and it turns out to be 0.00000001%. Help me triple my probability of landing a job by printing an original joke. That way I'm technically not lying when I say that I wrote for MAD Magazine.

Original joke:

Why could the NSA whistleblower not leave Russia?

Because he was snowed in!

Get it? Snowden...like Edward Snowden.

Rex Perez • Venice, CA

Rex Center — We're no statisticians, but we think your calculations about making it as a comedy writer are extremely generous. Here's an original joke of our own, just for you:

Why did the chicken cross the road?

To get hit by oncoming traffic, rather than hear a joke from Professor Rex Perez!

And not for nothing, but usually when people lie about writing for MAD, they say they DON'T write for us! —Ed.

HARDSHIP OF FOOLS

I am a frequent reader of MAD and a big fan of Spy vs. Spy and the Fold-ins. First of all, do more Spy vs. Spy! Second of all, I love doing the Fold-ins, but every time I do one I can never seem to get it right. It always takes me a few tries before I can read the answer. Is there any chance that you guys at MAD could make the Fold-ins a little bit easier?

Michael McQueen • Hastings-on-Hudson, NY

McQueen of Sheba — We acknowledge just how hard it must be for you to meet the exacting standards of the Fold-in — there aren't many people out there who can successfully fold a sheet of paper and pull it a couple of inches to the left. Heck, we work here, and we've never managed the feat! There's not much we can do to make the Fold-ins less fiendishly difficult (Al Jaffee is as intimidating and sadistic as they come) — but we can give you a hint about the answer to this issue's Fold-in: it's not "Clumsy, sausage-fingered numbskull Michael McQueen of Hastings-on-Hudson, New York." Hope that helps! —Ed.

LOO'S CHANGE

Whenever I receive the latest edition of MAD, I relocate the previous issue from the "Master Bath" to the magazine rack in the break room at work. Much to my surprise however, the copy seems to vanish by lunchtime. How can this be happening? Is it the Magazine Police removing MAD because it doesn't meet our corporate standards, the maintenance crew searching for something to line their rodent traps with or possibly just some low-life scumbag pilfering MAD for their own enjoyment? I brought it to the attention of the security guard, but he just laughed. In any event, I welcome your suggestions on how I can prevent the magazine from magically disappearing.

John Teoli • Lincoln University, PA

For Your Eyes Teoli — Hmm, that's a real head-scratcher! We'd put this mystery right up there with the disappearances of Amelia Earhart and D.B. Cooper! You're saying there's a magazine that's been marinating in the communal bathroom for two months, and then when you introduce it into the room where people eat...it disappears?!?

It's almost as if, oh, we don't know, someone may have THROWN IT OUT! That can't possibly be what happened, though.

Definitely keep up your investigation — then you can solve the follow-up mystery: "The Case of Finding a New Job After Being Fired for Conducting a Creepy Bathroom-based Investigation." —Ed.

INFO WORSE

As a child, I learned everything I needed to know about the 1972 Presidential election from MAD Magazine. Now I'm a grown-up, but I'm still turning to MAD to help me understand our country. What is wrong with me?

Lisa Jenio • Los Angeles, CA

Lisa Previously-Owned Lexus — What's wrong with you? Well, let's see...not only do you turn to MAD for political coverage, but now you're asking us for a psychiatric evaluation as well? We'd suggest you see a qualified therapist — and while you're in the waiting room, maybe page through an issue of Newsweek, hmm? You may not learn anything, but maybe you'll start writing to them for advice instead of us! —Ed.

BIRTH OF A DONATION

I am pleased to announce that my lifelong collection of MAD Magazines dating from 1959 has been accepted as a donation into the Cartoon Art Museum in San Francisco, California. My only hope is that will inspire the next generation of cartoonists without corrupting that noble art form.

Craig Erb • Morgan Hill, CA

Secret Blend of 11 Erb and Spices — We just bet you're pleased! You managed to get rid of 425 issues of MAD — that's definitely cause for celebration! And you know what they say about donations — the price is right! Still, your loss is The Cartoon Art Museum's...loss. Thanks for writing — see ya in the archives! —Ed.

MAD TWEETS

Comic-Con isn't until July, but The Big Bang Theory's Mayim Bialik was so excited for the event, she tweeted this picture of her "volunteer" shirt from 2011. Or maybe it was just laundry day...either way, thanks!

Job description

President of the United States seeks an ethically-flexible, easily manipulated patsy to lead the crown jewel of law enforcement.

Candidate must excel at:

- Disregarding sworn duties
- Ignoring damning evidence
- Never questioning authority

No experience necessary. Fluency in Russian a plus. Benefits include a much better health care plan with cheaper premiums.

WALL

Hi! I'm Crisp Hard-shtick. Hosting a game show is not new to me. For years I've been hosting @Midnight, a game show on Comedy Central. But hosting a game show that some-one other than insomniacs and night watch-men watch is new for me! So welcome to...

Our mission is to try to give good things to good people. And when I say good people, I mean people who not only do good deeds, but are also are good at hamming it up, good at over-acting, good at leaping around uncontrollably and good at shedding tears at a moment's notice. Basically, if they're good at making complete asses of themselves, they're our ideal contestant!

Tonight's contestants are brothers. Darrell and Rob are both teachers, and both good people. Darrell, you especially did something amazingly honest.

I guess I did, Crisp. I was a witness to a terrible car crash. It was so horrific, a man's hand flew off right in front of me!

Oh my God, how awful!

But you know what, Crisp? That hand landed at my feet, and instead of keeping it, I gave it back to that poor guy!

It's amazing that your first thought was to return that severed hand!

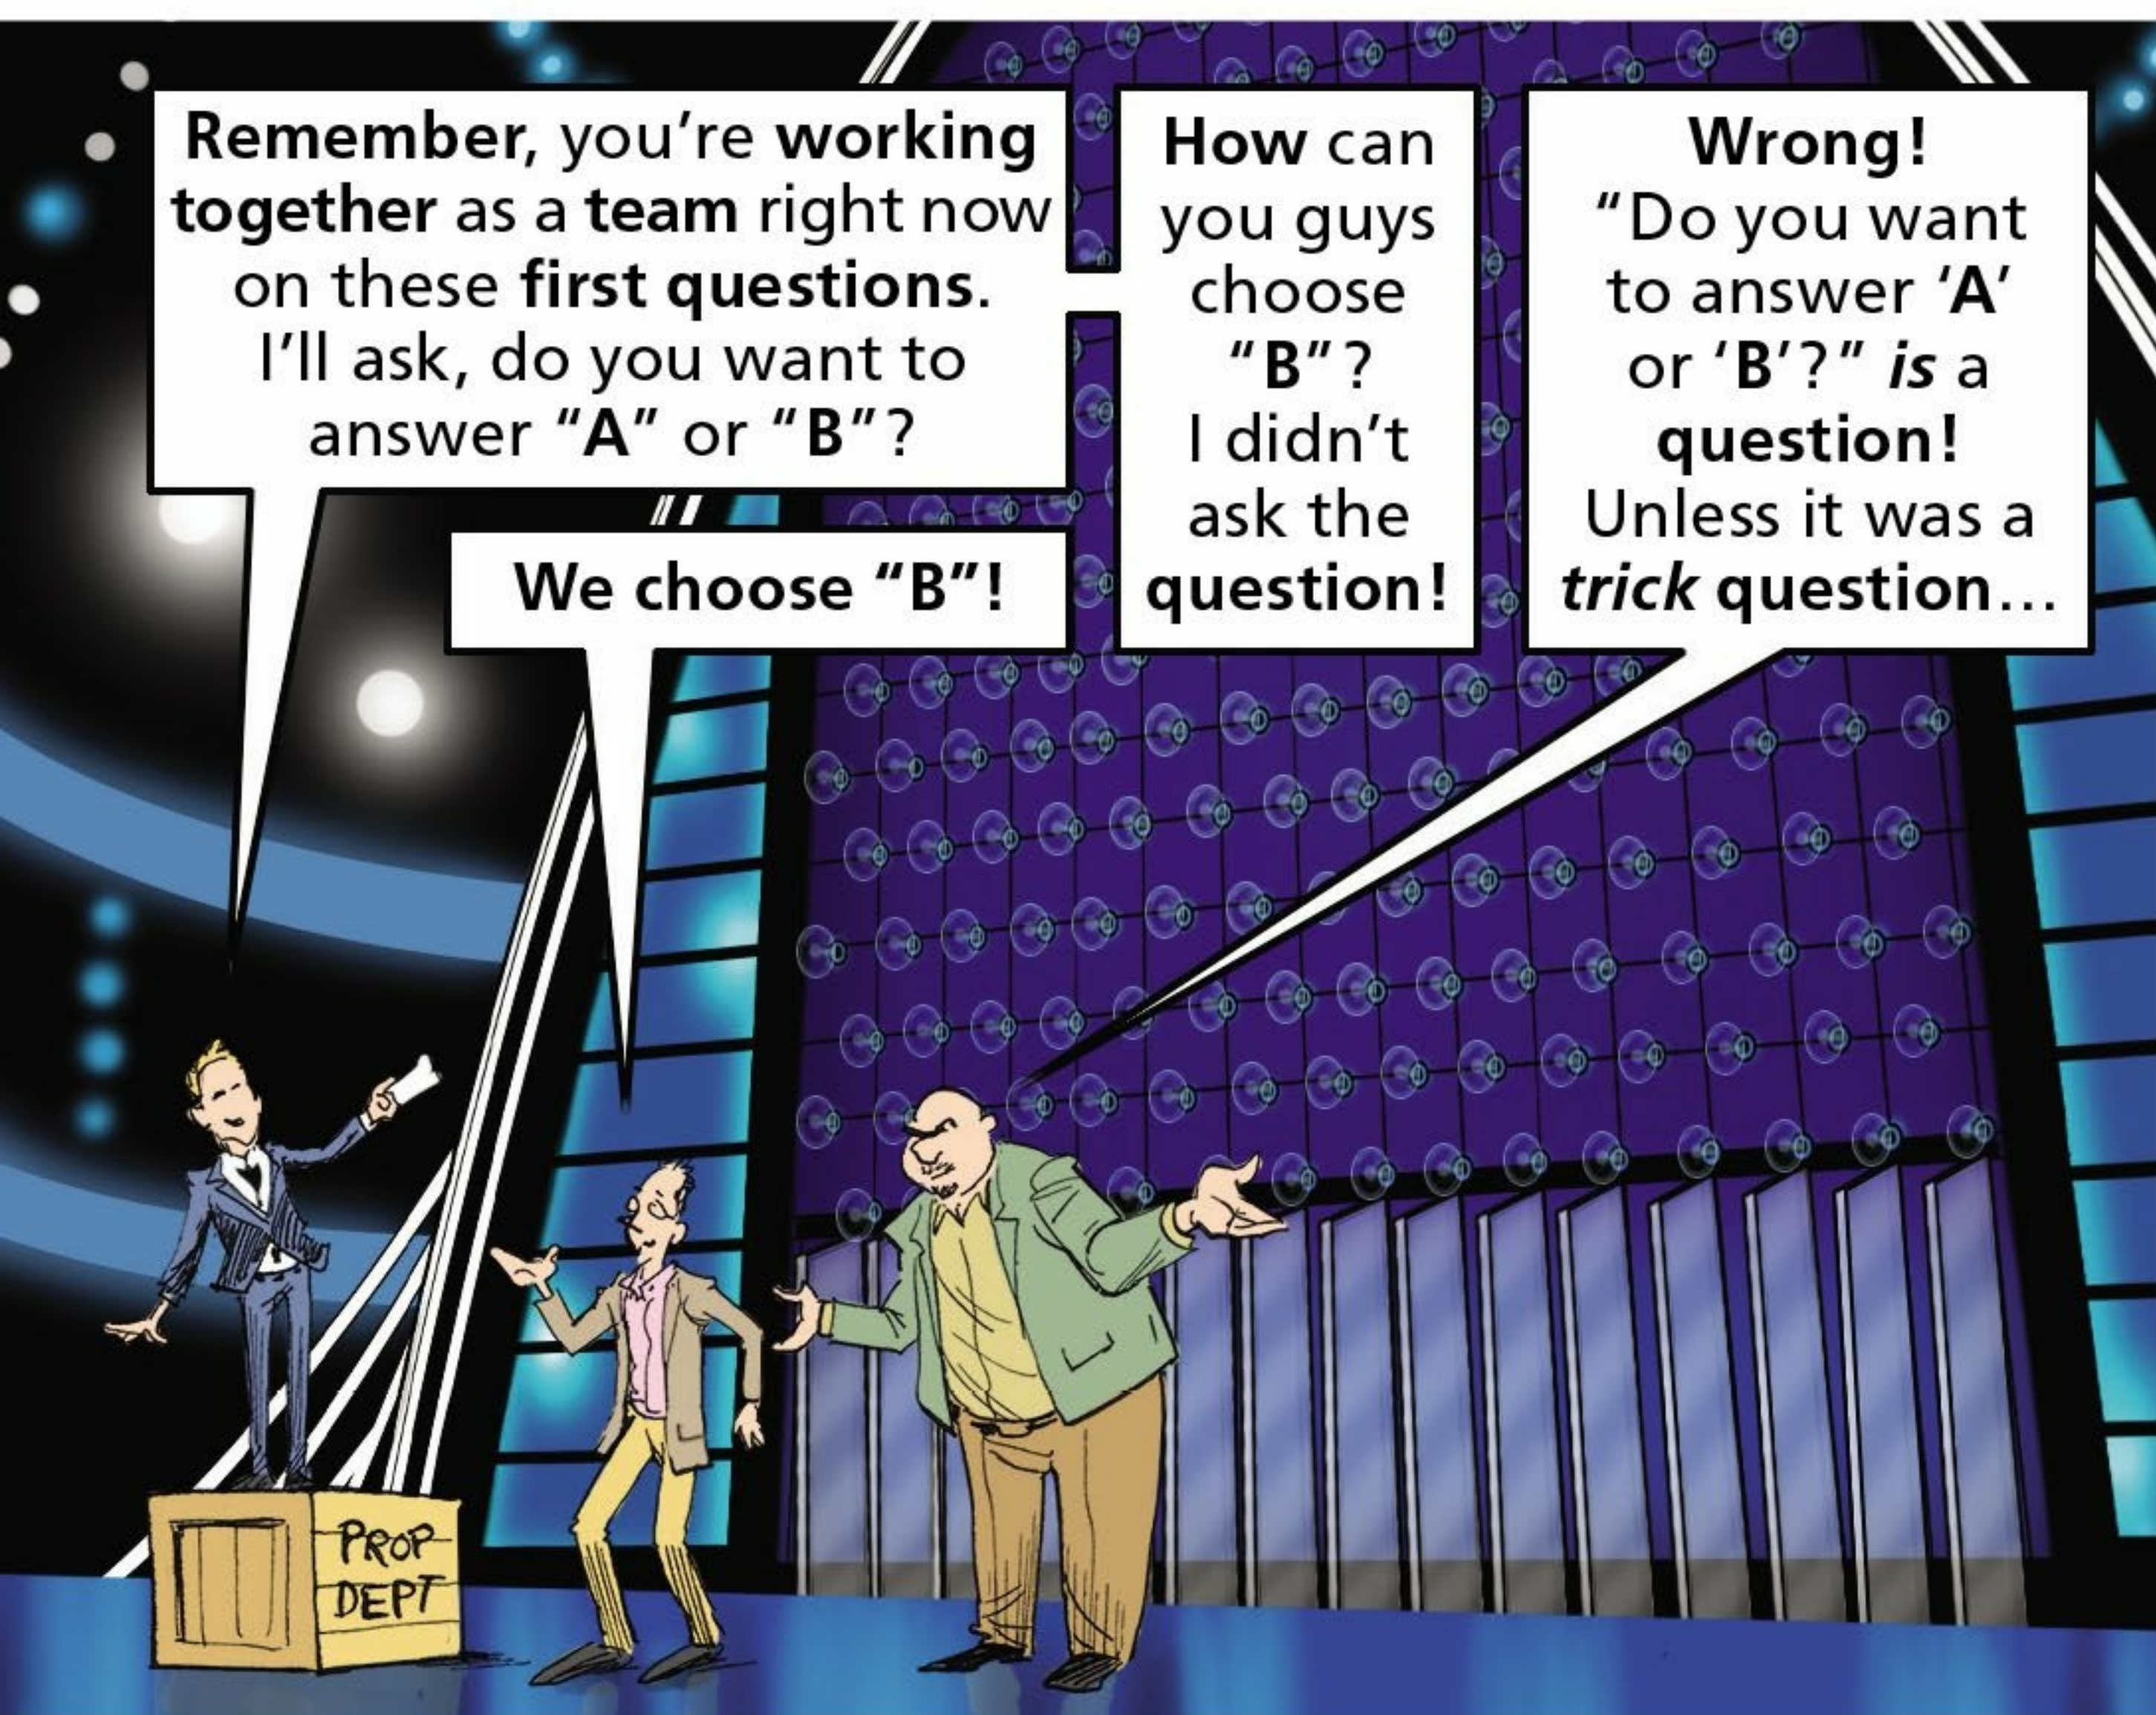

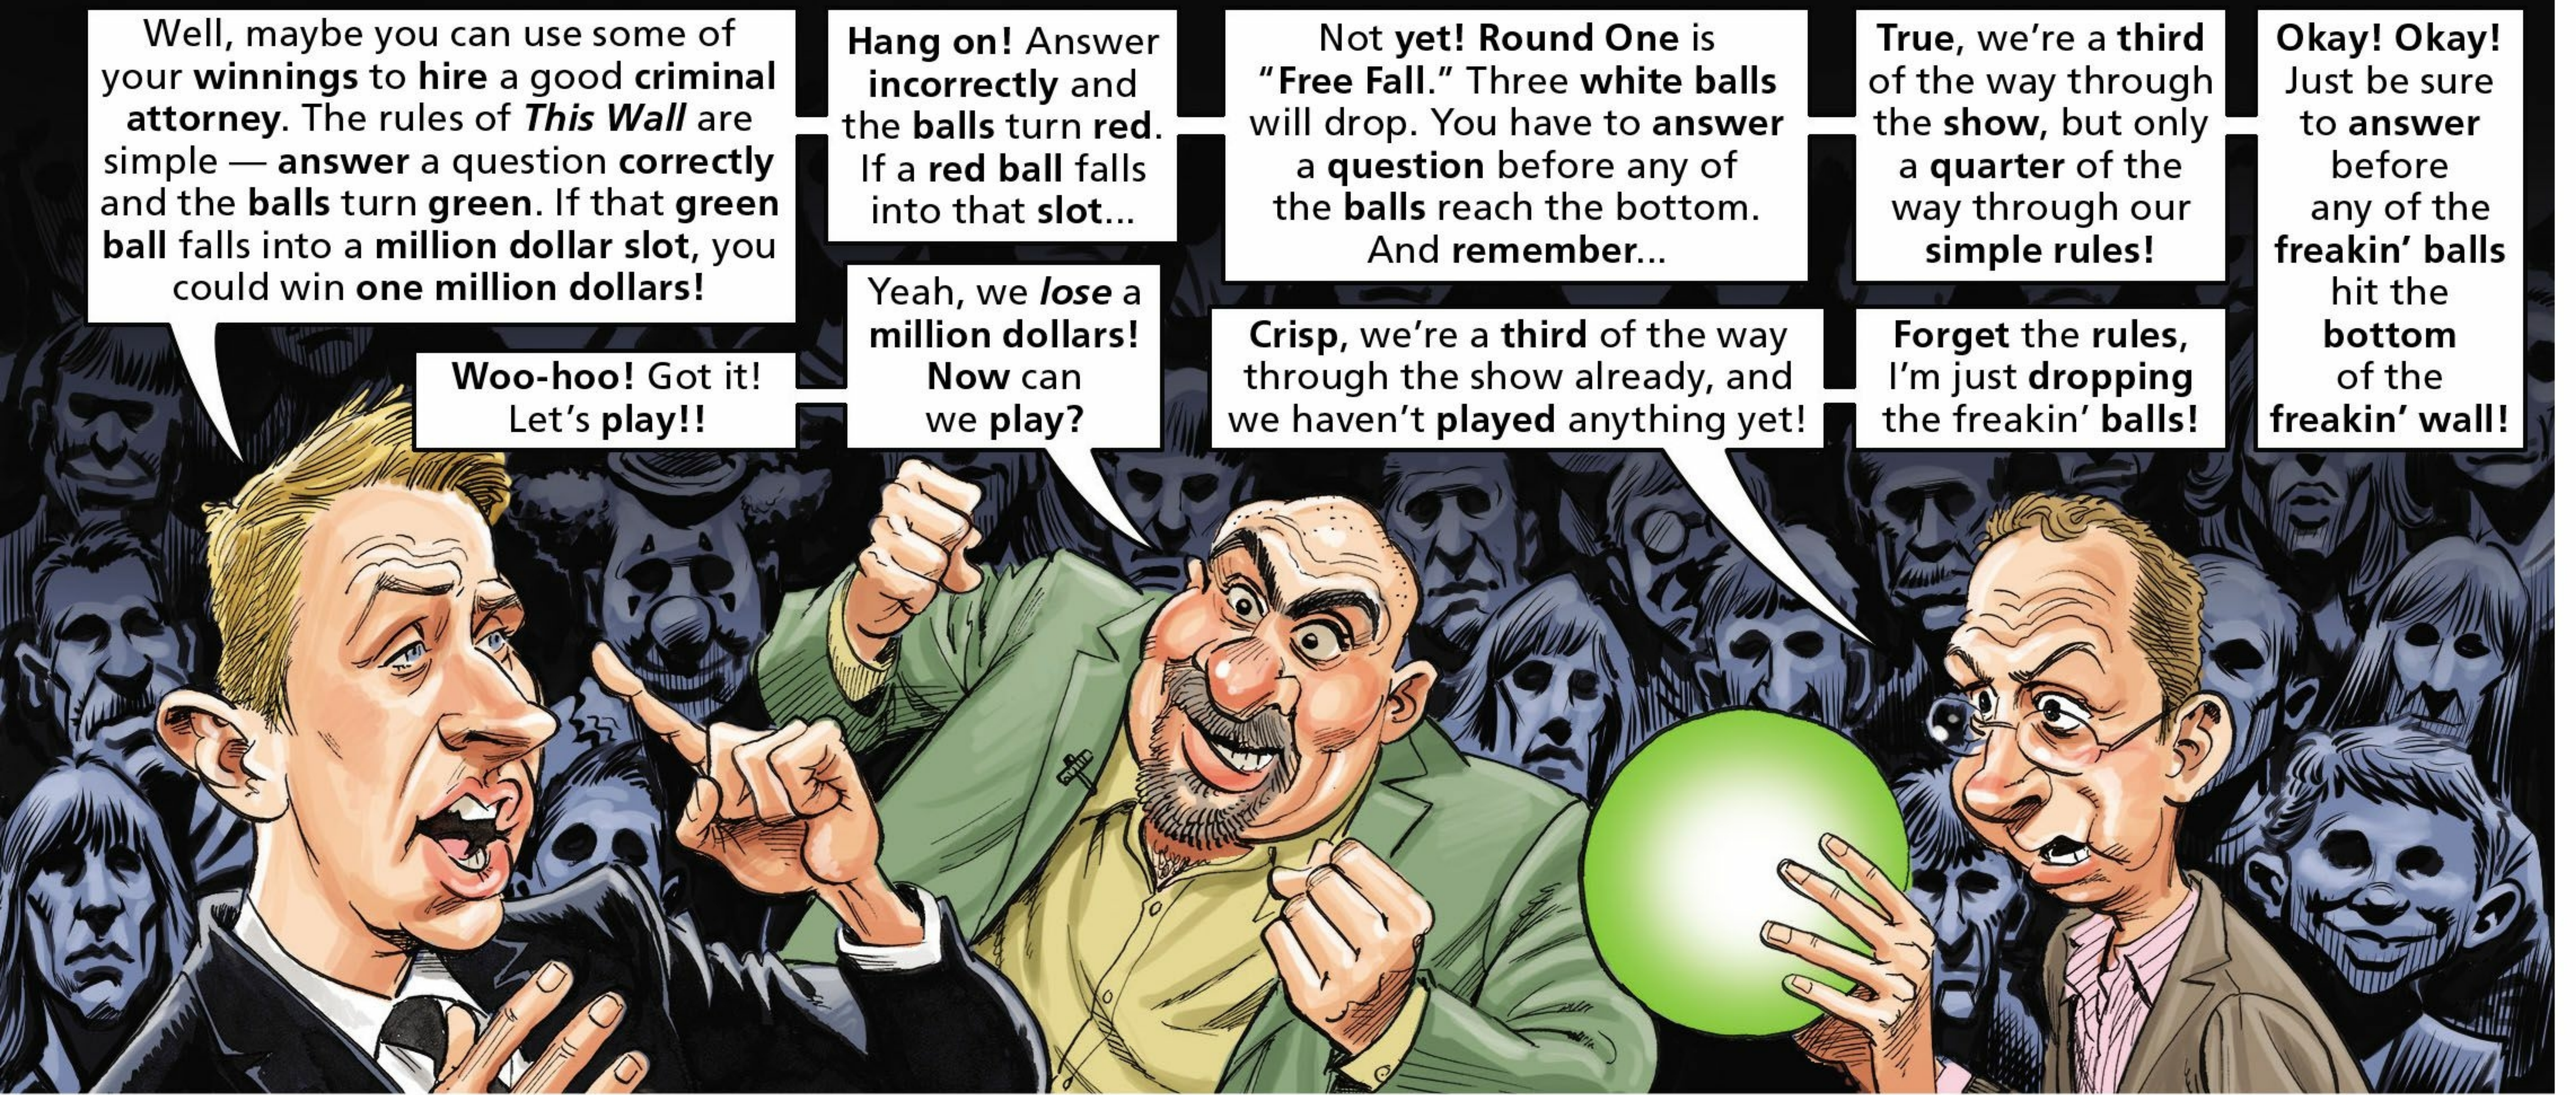

Actually, that was my second thought. My first thought was to put it on eBay, but with the oozing blood and everything, plus some ridiculous postal regulations against mailing human body parts, it just all became too much trouble!

Er...what a heart-warming story! Rob, you're a teacher, too, and I understand you donate pens, pencils, writing pads and all sorts of supplies your school needs! And you pay for all that out of your own pocket?

Well, I put it all on a credit card, and that's in my pocket, so yes.

That's an amazing gesture.

I thought it was an amazing gesture, too. But unfortunately the police didn't see it that way! Nor did the guy whose credit card I lifted!

Rob, here's a contract. If you sign it, you take home the $921 you won so far. If you tear it up, you'll take home the money that's on This Wall at the end of the game. It could be zero dollars or millions.

Crisp, this isn't a contract, it's a subpoena!

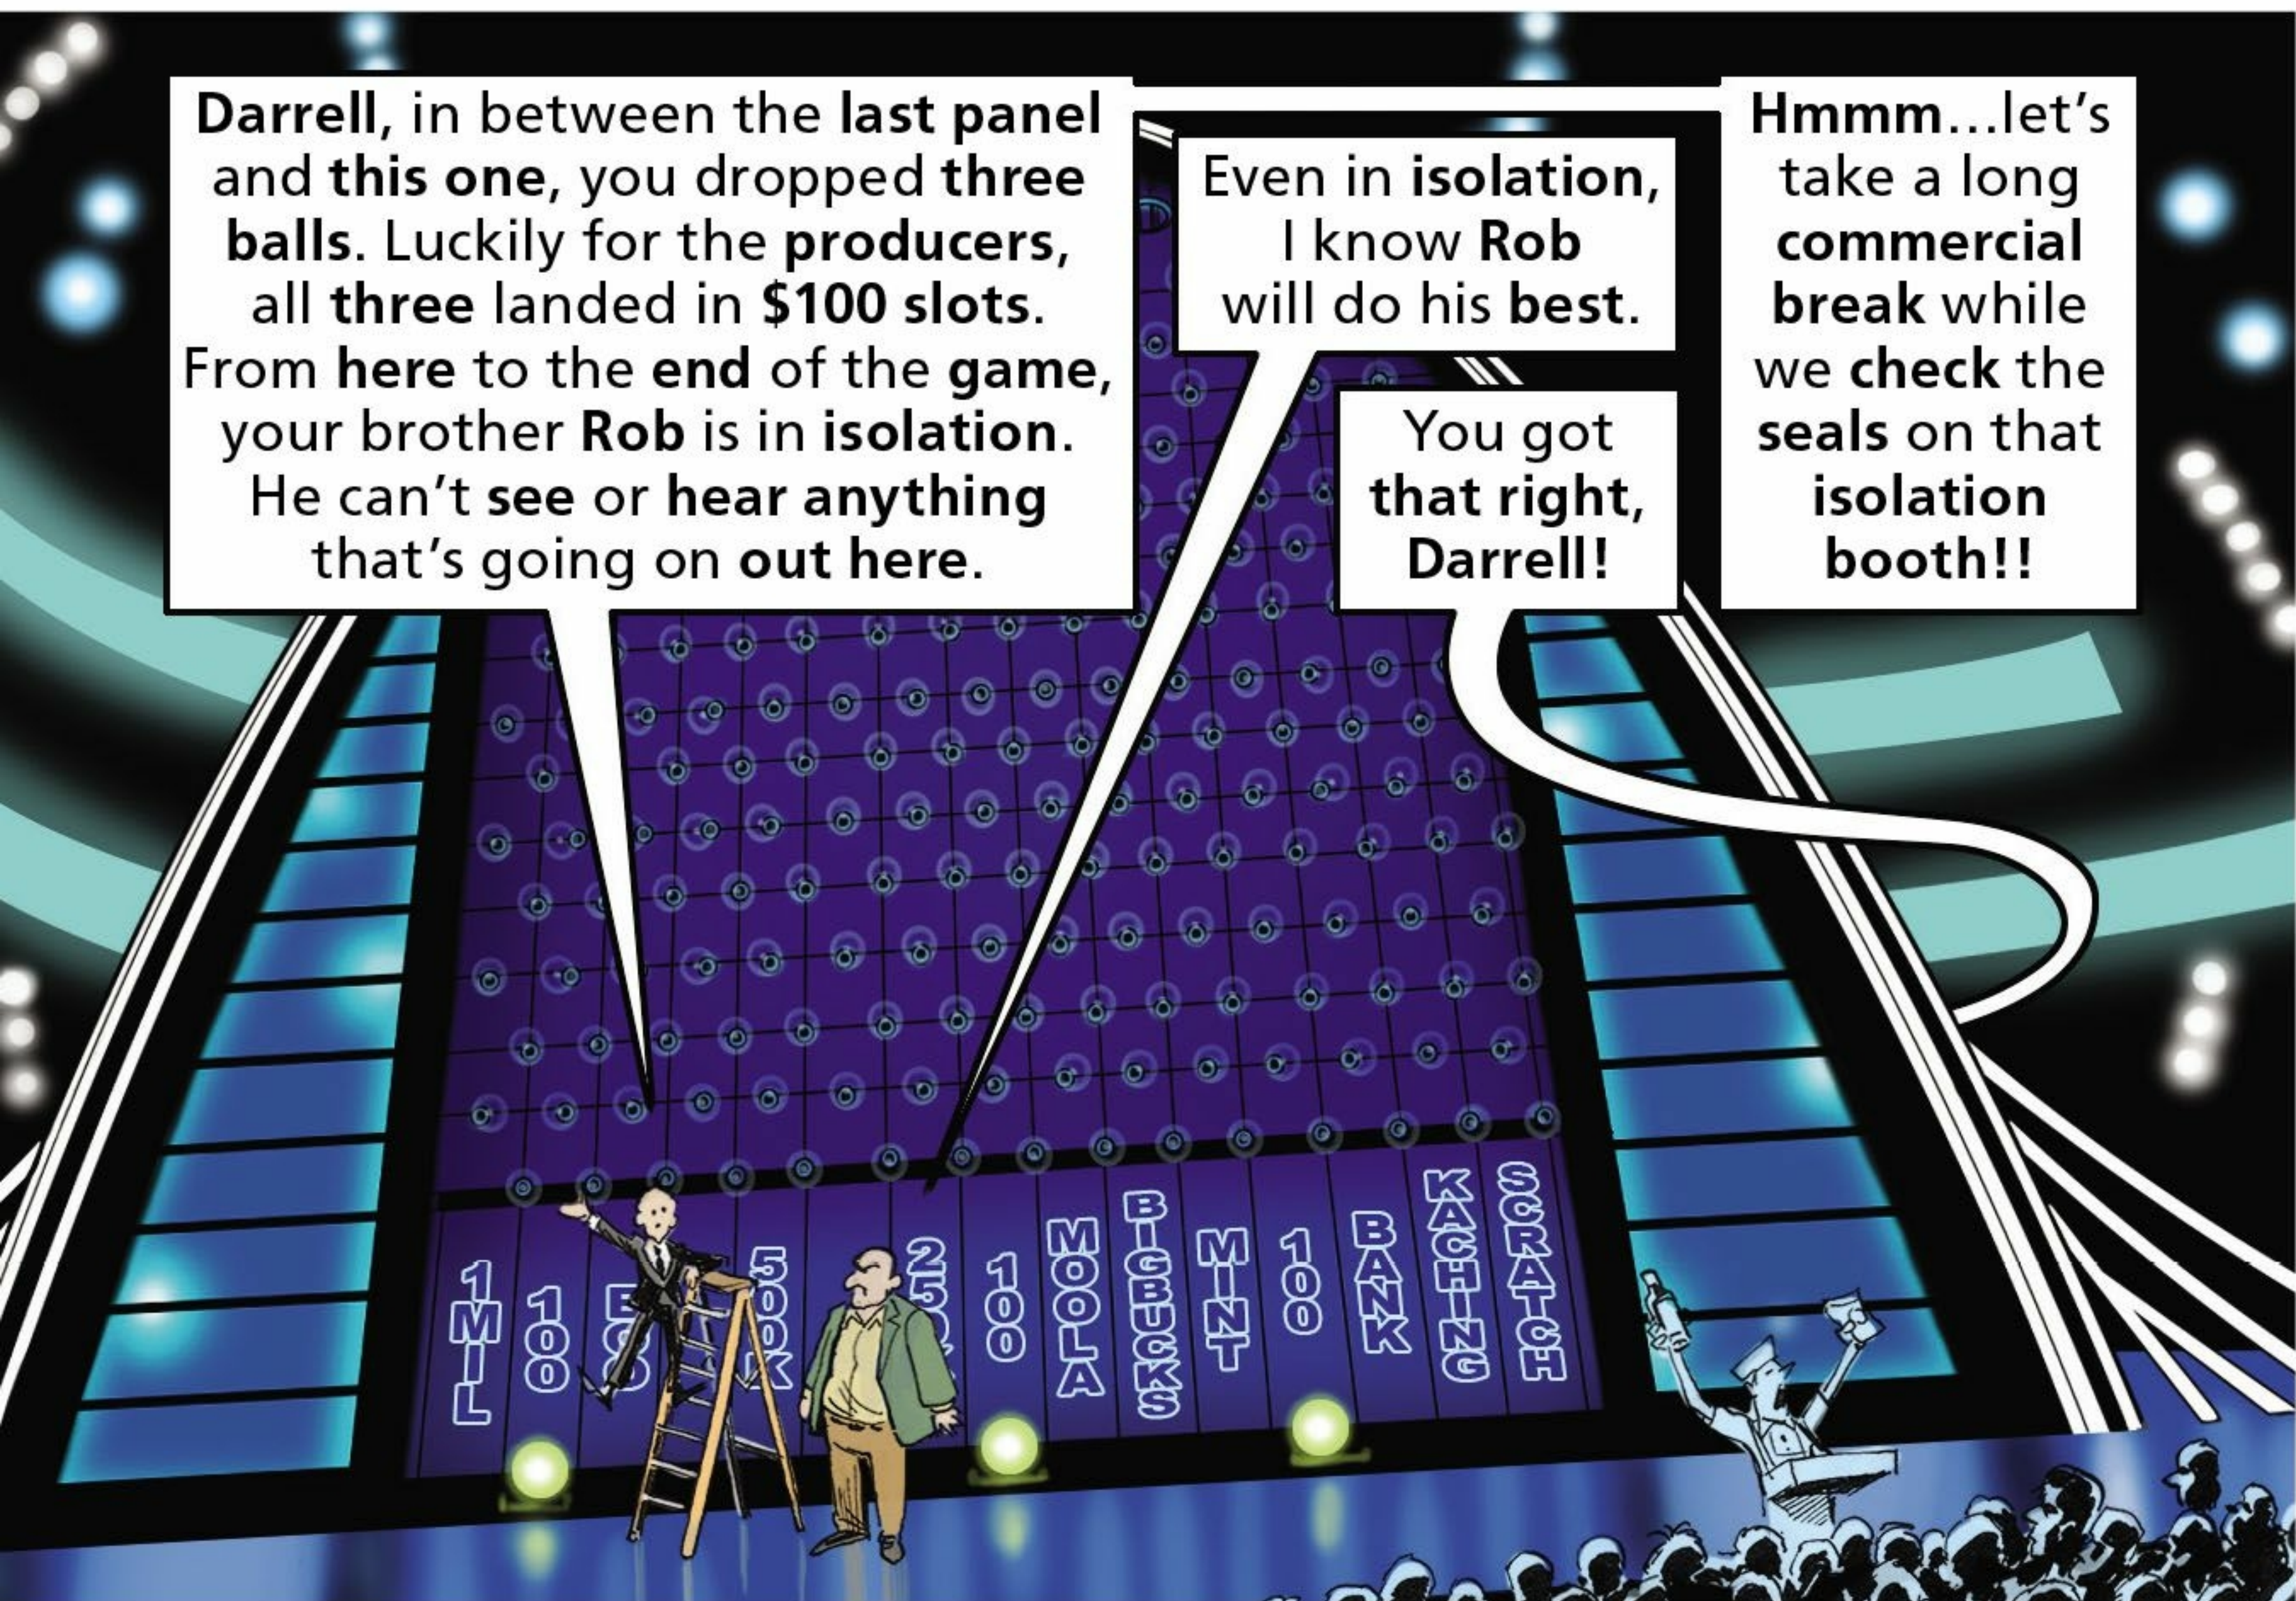

A subpoena?

Damn right! I'm suing you, Hard-shtick! Game show lovers know The Price Is Right created this game 35 years ago! They call it "Plinko." I call this a rip-off! See you and your balls in court, pal!

Rob, go backstage and into the isolation booth. We'll send you the proper contract.

Drew, you go backstage and security will throw you out!

Darrell, in between the last panel and this one, you dropped three balls. Luckily for the producers, all three landed in $100 slots. From here to the end of the game, your brother Rob is in isolation. He can't see or hear anything that's going on out here.

Even in isolation, I know Rob will do his best.

You got that right, Darrell!

Hmmm...let's take a long commercial break while we check the seals on that isolation booth!!

Darrell, you now have to judge your brother's ability to select which of these four answers is the correct one.

Can you give me a hint what the question is?

No, on this show we only give the answers.

"Only give the answers!" Wow, these guys not only steal parts of The Price Is Right, they rip off parts from Jeopardy! too!

The answers are Pope Francis, Sofia Vergara, Vladimir Putin, and Katy Perry. How do you think Rob will do answering this?

Rob watches television a lot and reads a lot of magazines, especially while he's teaching, so I think he'll know the answer.

Based on that, what number do want to play the ball on?

I'm going to be a little cautious and pick number four, because my sister's niece has five kids.

Wait, she has five kids, but you're picking number four?

No one likes one of the kids, so I'm not counting him. Although they have three pets, so maybe I should change my numb—

The number four slot it is! Wait, I'm not finished!

Oh, yes you are! I know the producers like it when contestants explain why they want to play a certain slot, because it stretches this thin premise of a show into an hour and they give away less money, but your story is too long and boring, even for our cheap producers!

Okay, Rob, you know the answers: Pope Francis, Sofia Vergara, Vladimir Putin, and Katy Perry. Now here's the question: which one of those four world-famous people has the longest toenails?

You caught me off guard! With those answers, I thought the question was going to be about pizza. I don't know for sure, but I think, er, maybe Vladimir Putin?

Sorry, Rob! You thought it was Putin, but we thought it was Pope Francis.

You "thought" it was Pope Francis? Don't you guys know for sure??

Come on, does anyone know for sure? Our audience doesn't watch us to learn anything, they tune in to see those balls change color, bounce around and drop! Besides, toenails — yuck!

Darrell, we credited you with the $300 you won earlier. Your brother got that question wrong, so that means your ball turns red and we have to deduct the amount indicated when the ball drops. You already picked slot four. There's the drop...

Lucky you, the ball landed in the lowest amount on the board — one dollar!

Great! So you're only deducting one dollar from our $300?

Correct, but that's the kind of math we don't want to trust to chance! Fortunately, the electronic board is showing us that $300 minus one dollar is...

$299!

Have they not fixed Rob's isolation booth yet?!? Damn!

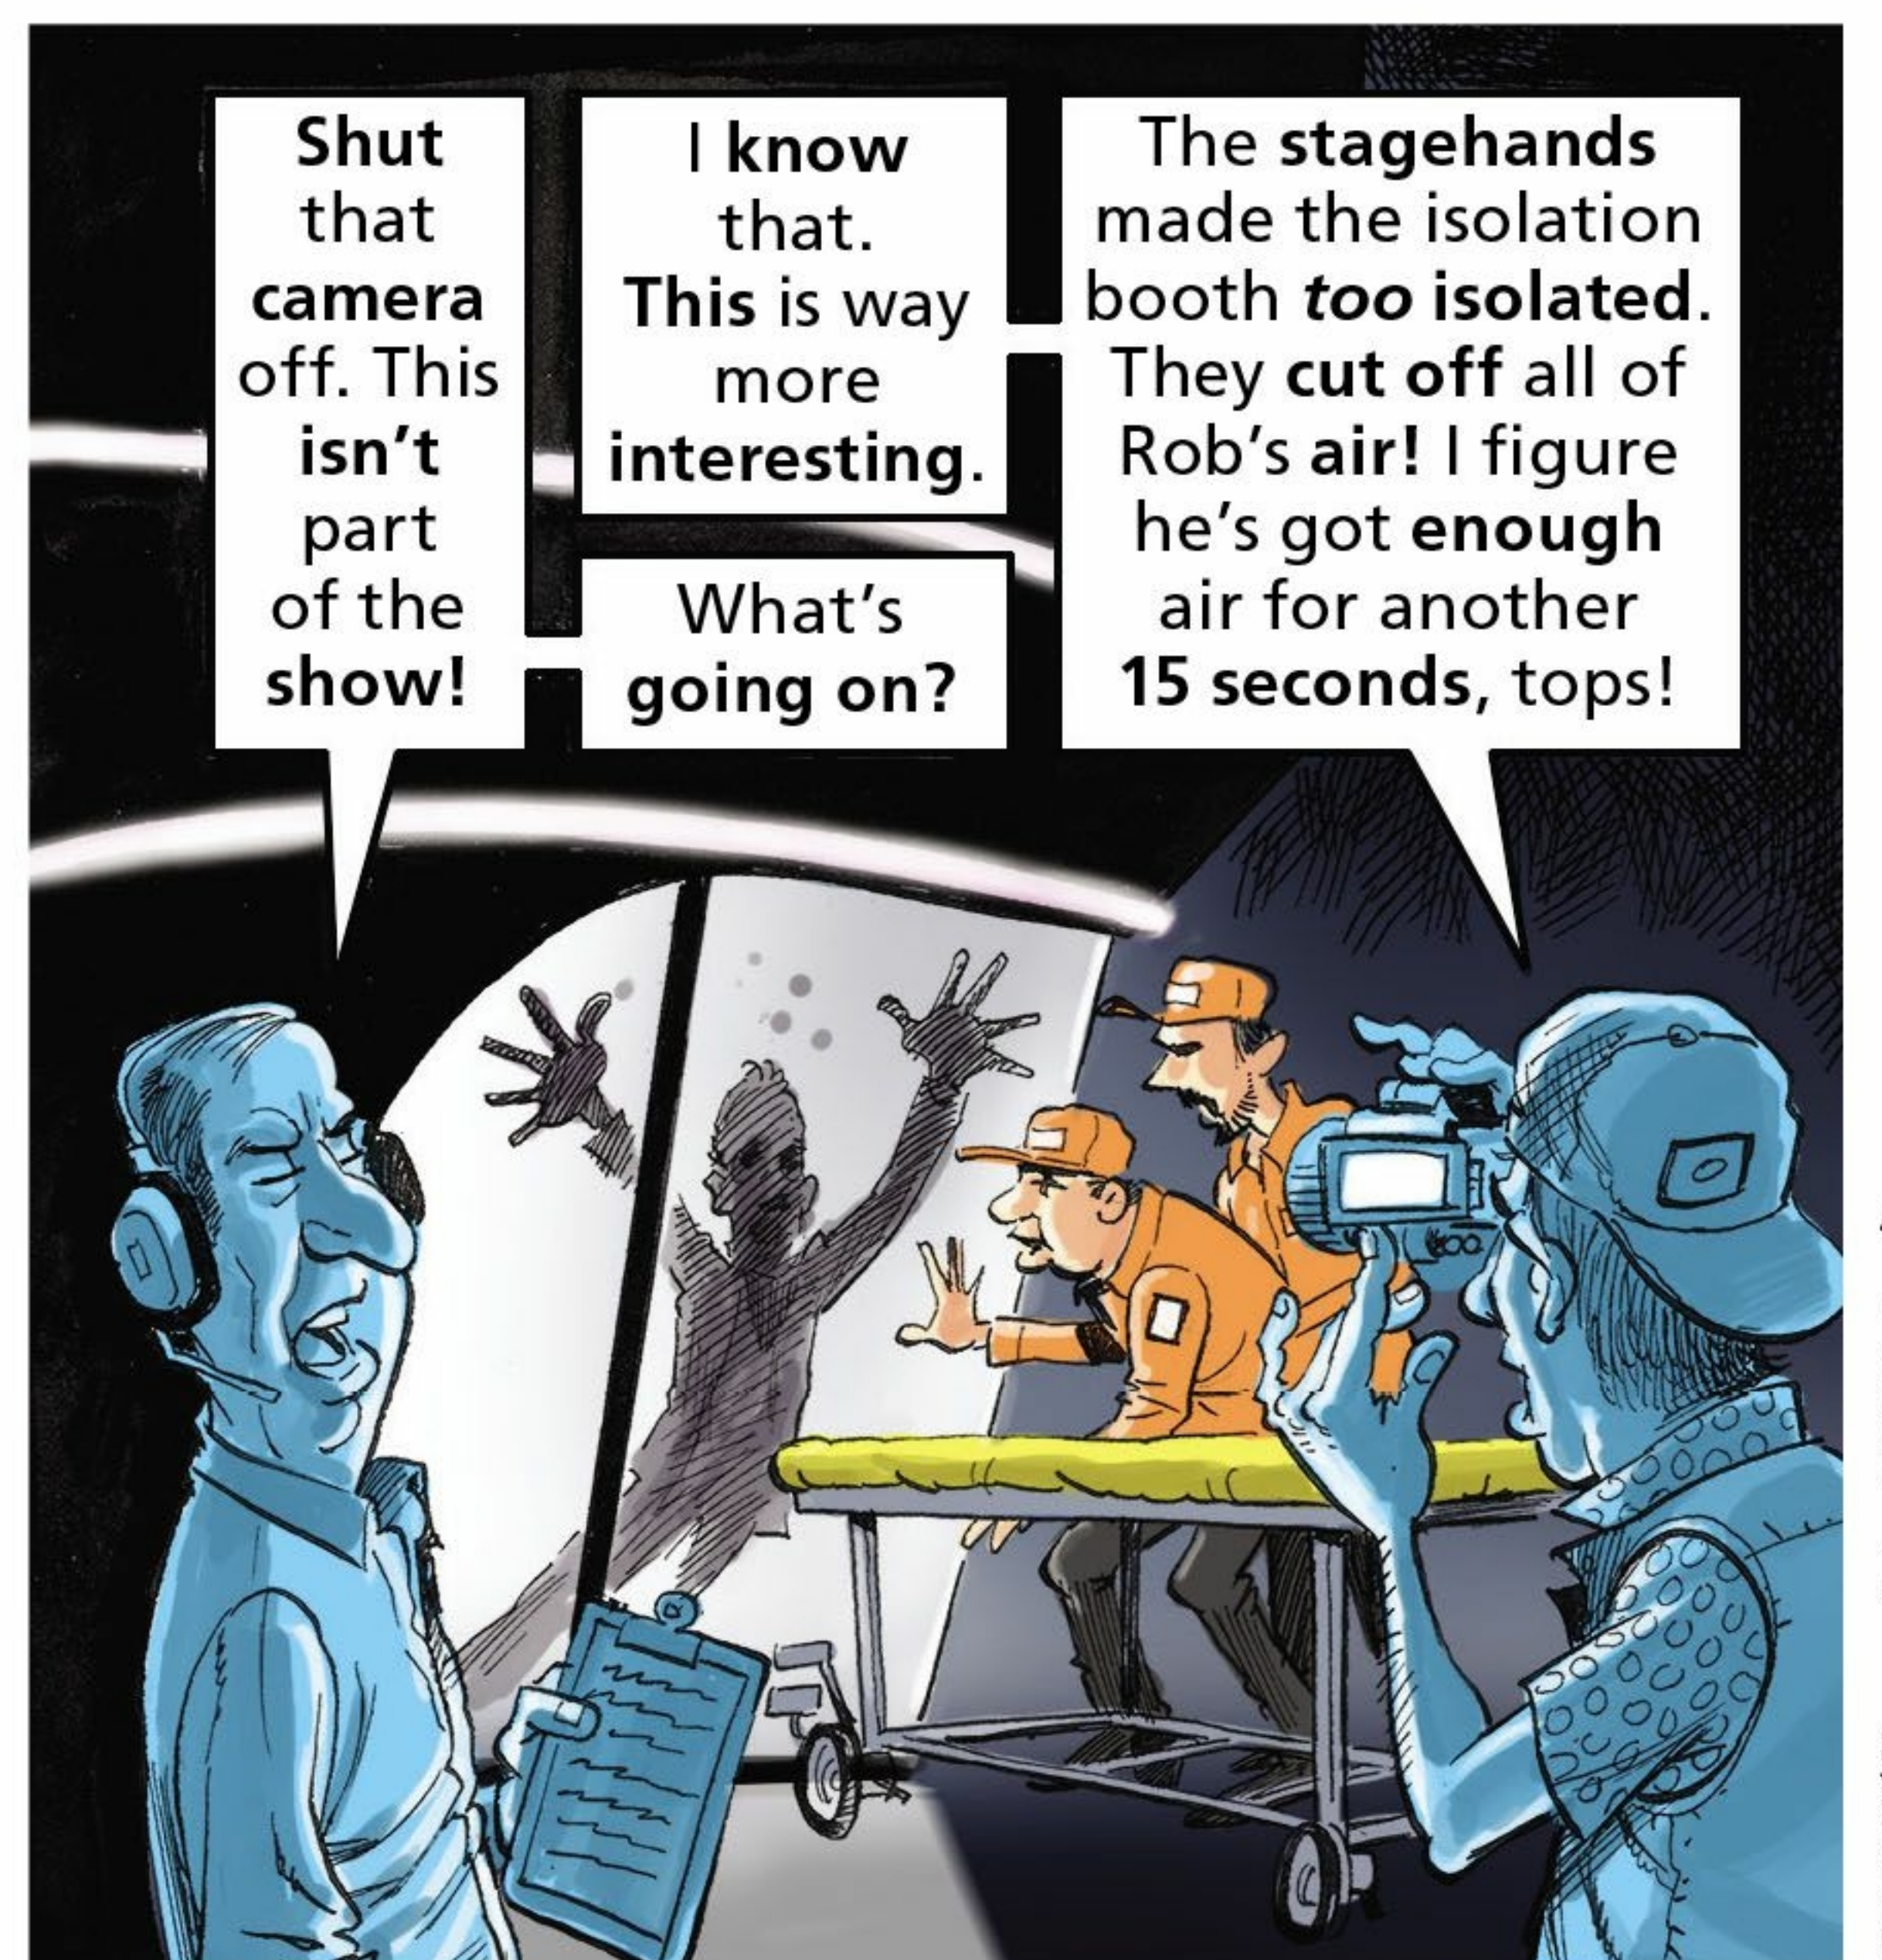

Now, we're going to put a two million dollar slot on This Wall. That creates the illusion that you guys might actually be able to win millions of dollars!

Amazing, but how can you afford to give away so much money?

I'll give you the answer to that question right after these next nine commercials!

Actually, I think you just answered my question. By having nine commercials in a row during every break, you can afford to give away billions!

Shut that camera off. This isn't part of the show!

I know that. This is way more interesting. What's going on?

The stagehands made the isolation booth too isolated. They cut off all of Rob's air! I figure he's got enough air for another 15 seconds, tops!

Darrell, because you and your brother have been such great contestants, and since we accidentally caused Rob to pass out from lack of air, we're putting $50,000 on the board!

Damn! If you had actually killed my brother, I bet that amount would have been way higher! Because maybe we could...

No, the board total is set to $50,000, plus, of course, your $299, for a total of $50,299!

What?! Is that all? What happened to the millions we were supposed to win?

Will the producers quickly bring Rob back to the stage for the emotional family face-off, before Darrell gets violent again?

Rob, we finally sent you a proper contract backstage. If you signed it, you go home with $921, the amount you had before you went into the isolation booth. If you tore up the contract, you go home with the amount on the board. And we won't reveal that amount until we drag out this scene and milk the suspense for all it's worth.

Rob, no matter what, you're my brother. If you signed that contract and we just get the $921, you're still my brother. You'll just be my deceased brother once we're outside in the alley!

So what did you do?

You stupid son of a b*tch!

God, I love you like a brother! And Rob, I can tell you now, we won $50,299. And Rob, split down the middle, you get a whopping $10,041!

I signed the contract.

I signed it, and then tore it up!

That's it! Until next week, this is...

Sorry, Crisp, there is no next week for This Wall! The idea of building a wall was mine! You guys lifted my idea, so I'm lifting this wall!

You can't do that!

You'd be amazed what a President can do! This is going to be the first section of my wall between the U.S. and Mexico. Tell your set designer we need another 900 miles of wall!

Do you know what they would cost??

What the hell do I care?! Mexico will pay for it — or the U.S. taxpayers, anyone but me! And my wall will be way more interesting than this one! In addition to the flashing lights, every 50 feet there'll be a picture of a celebrity who was lucky enough to be photographed with me!

And don't worry, one of my kids will start a business selling copies of the pictures. The money from those sales goes to my family. It's totally separate from the government!

The demand will be huge!

Sometimes it's obvious: the milk went bad. Your little brother cut the cheese. Your Uncle Beppe is wearing his cheap after-shave again. But sometimes, you catch a whiff of something that's hard to put your finger on, something that's vaguely familiar, yet pungent and off-putting, something that just begs the question...

The sweaty bike messenger drops off a corned beef sandwich at the coroner's office...

The janitor's slop sink overflows on sausage and peppers night at the nursing home...

is our new President — even after he _____ !

- 1) talked about dating his hot daughter
- 2) coughed into his hand instead of his arm
- 3) stiffed that Times Square Elmo on a tip
- 4) vehemently defended Nickelback
- 5) snuck snacks from home into a movie theater
- 6) watched This Is Us completely out of order

Worse still, with absolutely ZERO facts, he still claims _____ !

- 1) there was widespread voter fraud
- 2) Fuller House is superior to the original
- 3) that his spicy guacamole is homemade and not store-bought
- 4) gravity is just a theory
- 5) the Gremlins movies are documentaries
- 6) Obama rigged his lottery scratch-offs

And to think he appointed _____

- 1) Steve Bannon
- 2) The “Flex Seal” Guy
- 3) Amazon’s Alexa
- 4) Billy Bush
- 5) The former Verizon guy, now the Sprint guy
- 6) Dick Cheney’s podiatrist

- 1) his top advisor
- 2) People’s Sexiest Man Alive
- 3) Daniel Craig’s replacement as James Bond
- 4) the new spokesman for Dollar Shave Club
- 5) the Clooneys’ birthing coach
- 6) James Corden’s new bandleader

If we don’t do something, we can say goodbye to _____

- 1) basic human rights
- 2) quality Amish woodwork
- 3) any hope of reading a new Game of Thrones book anytime soon
- 4) those little wooden spoons you get with Italian ices
- 5) any chance of a Westworld porn parody happening
- 6) a Paul Blart Broadway musical and prepare for four years of _____ !

- 1) praying Mike Pence doesn’t become President
- 2) lingering Olympic fever
- 3) lackluster Kevin Hart vehicles
- 4) jokes involving the word “bigly”
- 5) disdain for cargo shorts
- 6) increasingly-confusing Oreo variations

I’m definitely going to the protest at _____ and

- 1) Trump Tower
- 2) the last remaining Radio Shack
- 3) a Redbox kiosk
- 4) participating Red Lobster locations
- 5) the site of the Bowling Green massacre
- 6) the Comedy Central roast of Brent Spiner everyone there is going to _____ !

- 1) wear a pink pussy hat
- 2) eat cronuts like it’s going out of style
- 3) massage each others’ feet
- 4) receive a participation award
- 5) talk like a pirate
- 6) quietly mourn the death of Vine

Let's be honest — it's terrible when your parents fight. But let's be brutally honest — if they're yelling at each other, it means they're not yelling at YOU! So that's a plus! And it got us thinking: your dysfunctional home life could actually be a blessing in disguise! Once you learn how to use it to your advantage, you'll be hoping your parents NEVER make up!

ENJOYING YOUR PARENTS' FIGHTS

FOR
PROFIT

CAPTURE THE MOMENT

Whether you put the whole thing on YouTube or post a carefully-edited nugget on Instagram — this could be your ticket to internet superstardom!

CURFEW SCHMURFEW

Stay out later AND seem compassionate! Can you say win-win?

LISTEN UP

Despite your hardwired tendency to ignore them, now is the time to pay critical attention and fill up your manipulation arsenal!

Right, so after I overheard you guys screaming about how there's never enough money, I thought, "How can I help?" So I quit Girl Scouts — no more stupid dues! And I did my hair the way I've been wanting it, which is super cost-effective! And we never need to buy earrings again!

KEEP IT GOING!

Remember, the key to YOUR happiness is your parents' UN-happiness! So, to make sure you have unlimited, unsupervised time, feed that fire!

BASK IN THE AFTERGLOW

Their post-screamfest guilt over damaging your developing psyche is the perfect time to cash in!

GIVE YOURSELF A BREAK

Just take out an earbud long enough to hear a bit of the blow-up and you've got yourself a homework pass!

GET THAT RIDE!

It's only a matter of time until one of them storms out of the house — and that's when your limo awaits!

JUNE 1, 2017

Today at the grocery store, I asked my mom if we could get some grape fruit snacks.

And my mom said no. And I said, "But they've got fruit in them!" And my mom said, "So, you want me to get you something chewy, and sweet, and full of grape flavor?" And I said, "Yes!" And my mom said, "And you promise you'll eat them?" And I said, "Yes!" And my mom said, "Fine. Do you want a big bag or a small one?"

Anyway. That's why we now have a 48-ounce bag of raisins in our cupboard, which I have to finish before I'm allowed to ask for anything at the store ever again.

JUNE 2, 2017

Ugh, bad day at school today. Mrs. Wilson, our English teacher, was out today, so we had a substitute teacher, and he was terrible. He walked in and said, "Hi, children" — which is already a terrible way to say hello to a room full of high schoolers — and then he said, "I'm your substitute teacher, Dick Dickerson."

And I laughed. Because his name was Dick Dickerson. And he said, "Is something funny?" And I said, "No." But then, because I was nervous, I kind of laughed again.

So he gave me a detention. Or at least, he tried to. He didn't know how detentions worked at our school, so my friend Chuck told him he needed to write up a "detention letter," and Chuck would take it to the principal's office for him. So Mr. Dickerson scribbled something down, and Chuck left the room with it, and he just never came back for the rest of the class.

I still think it was stupid of him to punish me for laughing, because really, this was all his fault. He could've just said his name was "Mr. Dickerson". Or gone by Richard, or Rich, or Rick. Saying "I'm Dick Dickerson" to a room full of people is the end result of a lot of bad choices.

JUNE 3, 2017

I feel bad for whichever servant in "Beauty & the Beast" got turned into a chamberpot.

JUNE 4, 2017

I read today that the only letter that's not on the Periodic Table of Elements is "J". Which made me feel a little bad for J, honestly.

So now I'm going to fix that by writing a tiny "J" on every Periodic Table of Elements I see.

JUNE 5, 2017

So, I got called into Vice Principal Hammond's office today. He said, "Do you know why you're here?" And I said, "No." And he said, "It's because of your substitute teacher on Friday. Dick Dickerson." And I sort of laughed a little, and he said, "It's not funny. He found your blog post about him."

And that's when I stopped laughing.

I've never had anyone tell me that they saw my blog. I kind of figured nobody I knew read it. And it got worse, because it turns out, once Mr. Dickerson complained, Vice Principal Hammond started going through the archives of my blog. He had even printed out pages of it, and started reading stuff back to me.

There was stuff I kind of forgot that I'd put in there, like about how everyone hates our guidance counselor's annual magic show, and how Mrs. Bolton has a mustache, and how everyone makes fun of Vice Principal Hammond for trying to use teen slang.

I asked if I was in trouble, and he said he didn't know, because the school didn't really have a policy on this. "But this is wack," he said. "This is very, very wack."

JUNE 6, 2017

I can't say exactly what happened at school today, but let's just say I may or may not have had a meeting, and in that meeting I may or may not have been told about a new no-blogging-about-school policy by someone whose job title rhymes with "mice invincible".

Also, side note: "Mice Invincible" would be an amazing name for a group of superhero mice.

JUNE 7, 2017

We had a big school assembly today where we were all told that we're not allowed to talk about anything that happens at school on social media, "whether directly, or indirectly, including through rhyme."

Word got out pretty quickly that this was because of my blog. Which meant that everyone started to read it. And now a lot of people are mad at me because of what I've said about them, like talking about how Doug Spivak is so dumb he believed it when people told him "spork" was short for "spaniel fork", and it's a special utensil that's only supposed to be used by dogs.

And it gets worse. Because when I got home, we were all eating dinner, and my mom said, "So, is there anything you want to tell us? About a certain blog you run?" I guess my parents have also read through all the archives of the blog now, and there's enough bad stuff in there that they've grounded me until future notice.

Anyway, I think it's probably for the best if I shut this blog down and go quiet for a while. Still, it was really fun while it lasted.

OK, this is one final post, with two small updates.

First: A few days after my last post, my little sister Sophie confessed something to me. She asked, "You remember when mom brought up blogs at dinner?" And I said, "Yeah." And she said, "I was so scared. I was sure they'd found mine." And I said, "You have a blog, too?" And she said, "Yep. And it's so much meaner than yours. But at least I was smart enough not to use anyone's real names."

(I hate that my eight-year-old sister is so much smarter than me.)

And second: A few days ago I was at the library and I heard a few girls who don't go to my school. They were talking about how sad they were that Planet Tad had shut down, because they thought it was actually pretty funny.

So...for what it's worth...Planet Tad is still shut down. But I hear there might soon be a pretty cool blog out there, written by somebody I definitely don't know, and it might be called Planet Chad. ☹️

Since names are apparently destiny for Smurfs, why do Smurfs name their kids things like Vanity or Clumsy? Why not call your kid "Awesome Smurf"?

PLANET TAD @PlanetTad 37m
I bet a terrible job would be opossum coroner. It'd just be a lot of, "He's dead because— OH MY GOD HE'S ALIVE!"

PLANET TAD @PlanetTad 1h
Why are they called Alvin and the Chipmunks? Is Alvin not a chipmunk? And if not, well... what is he?

PLANET TAD @PlanetTad 2h
There is no musical that could not be called "The Sound of Music".

PLANET TAD @PlanetTad 4h
I wonder why all school buses are yellow. I'd be more excited to go to school if my school bus were red with flames painted on the side.

PLANET TAD @PlanetTad 7h
"Batman" is a weird name for a superhero, because it sounds like what you'd blurt out if you couldn't remember the word "vampire".

Although marijuana has begun to shed its stigma in recent years — gaining legalization in a number of states, becoming better appreciated for its medicinal uses and being the subject of a killer tattoo that Duane got on his calf — there are still plenty of troubling things about it. 25, to be exact!

The Worst Things About Marijuana

1 It makes you paranoid and lazy — so while you're convinced the cops will kick down the door at any minute, you're not going to let that stop you from watching one more episode of Rick and Morty.

2 Pot brownies: experience the anxiety of thinking you're trapped in a time loop and worrying about your weight at the same time!

The drug has arguably done wonders for the advancement of multiple art forms... unfortunately, fashion design isn't one of them.

4 It's said to relieve stress — but tell that to your roommate who has to hear you play Bob Marley's "Buffalo Soldier" 30 times a day.

5 What's scarier: pot being a "gateway drug," or the fact that the gateway leads straight into a Diners, Drive-ins and Dives marathon?

Ever since they legalized medical marijuana in Florida, your grandmother's glaucoma has improved... but now she won't shut up about Burning Man.

7 Stoners' weird fascination with 4:20 — because if there's one thing pot makes you, it's punctual.

Users who argue that marijuana can't be bad because it's "natural" — obviously, these people have never encountered poison ivy or kale chips.

9 Here's a sobering statistic: it causes 98.4% of all bongo drumming in America.

10 Scheming stoners who surf WebMD all day looking for ailments they can use to get a medical-pot prescription. Sorry, brah, but "whimpering bladder" isn't covered.

11 Newfangled smoking equipment that needlessly complicates the whole process. Because you haven't truly been high until you've vaped from a Darth Vader helmet attached to a didgeridoo.

12 Weed is actually 1,000 times deadlier than all other drugs combined, once you factor in all the Hostess Sno Balls it makes you eat.

13 Cheesefart hotpants poophat: that's not even a joke, yet every high person reading this right now is giggling like a moron.

14 Studies have shown that pot can actually boost productivity — provided that items such as "Stare into Your Toaster" and "Vacuum the Backyard" were already on your to-do list.

15 The brain-damaging side effects. Remember when Snoop Dogg became Snoop Lion and put out a reggae album? Neither does he.

16 The fact that, at this very moment, someone in jail on a pot-possession charge is stamping out the vanity plate for a Denver dispensary owner's Bentley.

17 Increased tax revenue from legal marijuana sales could go towards better roads and schools...but it could just as easily go towards airbrushing a sweet dragon on the side of city hall, depending on how baked everyone is when it's time to vote.

Smoking can be a profound communal experience that brings people closer together. Which sounds great, until that dude you share a spliff with at Lollapalooza decides it's cool to crash in the back of your Prius for a few months.

19 Corporations that are obviously catering to an "herbally enhanced" audience but don't have the guts to actually come out and say it. Let's just call Fourthmeal what it is, Taco Bell: Burnout Brunch.

The fact that you can't attend HempCon in your Phish t-shirt without people automatically assuming that you smoke. Um, hello, some of us don't need drugs to enjoy free-form jam bands and alternative industrial materials!

21 Legalized prescription marijuana could ease the suffering of millions, but ask yourself: aren't the lines at Walgreens already bad enough?

22

That moment when you think you're having a heated debate about theoretical physics, and then suddenly realize you've been talking to your cat about trail mix for the past hour.

23

That hipster-bearded Zig-Zag weirdo. We just don't like him.

24 Stoner comedies. Are the filmmakers too stoned to realize they've been continually remaking Cheech and Chong's Up in Smoke for the past 40 years...or is the audience too stoned to care?

Draconian possession laws that force otherwise law-abiding citizens to choose between hard time or writing a "Worst Things About Marijuana" article as community service.

I TOLD you we
